In the garden of Number Ten Mr. and Mrs. Churchill welcomed to England the five French boys who escaped from occupied France and crossed the Channel in two canoes. They saw E-boats and a German plane. Fortunately the Nazis didn't see them.

The Premier had some champagne brought out and the toast was "Free France." The escape of these good youngsters is one more indication that millions in the occupied countries only await the inspiration of a British landing to rise en masse against the oppressors. May the day soon come.
