

ARMAMENTS MASSED FOR INVASION

Britain has been called an unsinkable aircraft carrier.

It might also be called one vast dump of war material.

Censorship now partly lifts the curtain, to reveal something of what there is. To prevent rust these 25-pounders are spray-

~~gun~~-painted. Everything in these temporary dumps is kept up to concert pitch. At any hour now may come the signal to ~~man~~<sup>set</sup> the armies on the march. Nothing they could conceivably need will be lacking.

For

~~an~~ 500-lb bombs, and much heavier ones, the American Airforce has an insatiable appetite. So well concealed is it all as to pull wool over the eyes of Nazi reconnaissance.

~~Summum Regnum~~ A bomb in sheep's clothing might be quite an idea.

Aircraft from the States and our own factories accumulate in such quantities as to ensure mastery of the air. Corsairs, Thunderbolts, Lightnings, Mustangs, Spitfires, Typhoons - for very department of air fighting the Allies are better equipped than the enemy.

Over the Nazis the shadow of defeat is thrown by the air fleets, ~~and~~ tanks, guns, transport and weapons of all kinds now at the allies' command. May it soon be rolling along the continental roads on the way into Germany.

A long road of trial, travail and disappointment has at last brought us from Dunkirk and Pearl Harbour to our present unassailable position. Material on a scale inconceivable not long ago equips the finest armies the world has ever known. The regiments that fought heroically when they had almost nothing will go forth to battle fortified by the knowledge that everything is now theirs.
Such armies, with such arms, in such a cause, will inevitably prevail.
