African musicians drum out their welcome in honour ~~of the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret as their~~ ^{THE ROYAL} tour of Southern Rhodesia continues. ~~Her Majesty has won~~ ^{THE QUEEN MOTHER} the hearts ^{SHOWED} of thousands of people ~~by her~~ obvious delight in the children ^{WHO GREETED HER} who have turned out to greet her.

The Royal train - the ivory train as it has come to be called - passed through the impressive countryside on its way to Umtali, where the Queen Mother unveiled a memorial to Kingsley Fairbridge, founder of the Fairbridge Memorial College for young settlers.

At Leopard Rock came a welcome rest for the Queen Mother tempered by anxiety for the Princess, now stricken with a cold.

The next engagement was at the shining arch of the Birchenough bridge, third largest single span in the world, across the Sabi River.

The Zimbabwe ruins lie beyond the bridge, one of the ~~myriad~~ timeless mysteries of Africa, and here the Queen Mother signed the visitors' book before her visit to the famous Finger Rock nearby in the Morgenster Mission, established by the Dutch Reformed Church - a memorable tour of great goodwill.
