

MAKARIOS LEAVES CYPRUS: ATHENS CROWDS PROTEST

Banners with anti-British slogans were very much in evidence in Athens soon after news came that Archbishop Makarios was not after all to visit the Greek capital. Big demonstrations protested against the exile of the Cyprus leader. Damage was done to many shops and buildings and signs in English. In Athens and Salonika more than 150 soldiers, students and police were injured before the day was out.

~~From the morning of the 1st of June, the Archbishop of Cyprus, Makarios, has been in the city of Nicosia, where he has been since his departure from Cyprus. He has been in the city of Nicosia, where he has been since his departure from Cyprus. He has been in the city of Nicosia, where he has been since his departure from Cyprus.~~

52 ~~The morning in Cyprus~~ the morning in Cyprus
Bells rang from every church in Nicosia, a call to the people to wish God speed to the Archbishop, who was 2 fly ~~going~~ to Athens. The leader of the Cyprus Union with Greece Campaign planned consultations with the Greek Government. Makarios seemed in high spirits as he left the Archbishopric on his way to the airport. All this took place just before the Governor disclosed his hand and deported the Archbishop, with the Bishop of Kyrenia, another priest and an editor.

Troops then guarded the Archbishopric. It is hoped that the ~~Archbishop's~~ ^{o M.A.} removal will bring peace.
