ZEPP'S TRIAL FLIGHT.

The latest wonder of the air --- the new Zeppelin named Hindenbur emerged slowly from its hangar --- the largest thing that flies. Three hundred and fifty trained men hung on to the mooring ropes ready for the command to ~~let~~ ~~us~~ cast off. Diesel engines throbbed as the great ship lifted into the skies ---- making her first ~~trial~~ trial trip over Lake Constance.

CASTLE IRWELL.

Having been told that Castle Irwell was a good bet for the Grand National the G.B. News cameras tripped hopefully down to Lingfield to take a few action studies. Here is the field tripping hopefully over the first jump and here is the ~~winner~~ tripping hopefully to the winning post. But unfortunately it was Jungle Song because Castle Irwell ran out at one of the jumps and ran his ~~own~~ owner-rider, Pete Bostwick, into a £25 fine.

CAMBRIDGE SPORTS.

Having lost our money we went foot-racing. This sort of race we know --- but here's a new one. At Fenner's they persuaded the University Bulldogs to race after an electric undergraduate ---- well, if he isn't exactly electric at least he's a bit of a shock. It may start a new vogue of racing in top hats, but what they want is high jumping in crash helmets.
