QUEEN MARY.

Guildford --- Queen Mary had a rapturous welcome when she drove through the streets for a day of duties. One of the many tasks performed by Her Majesty was the starting of the pile-driver on the last foundation of Guildford Cathedral.

AUSTRALIAN SOLDIERS.

New South Wales --- For the first time since the war an Australian Expeditionary Force has left Sydney. But luckily it's only a mock war. The Army and Navy are combining on manoeuvres, carrying out with realism the rehearsal for the defence of the Commonwealth --- if necessary!

POLICE.

Sydney --- but this time they're policemen, manoeuvring on the Showground. Policemen have to be prepared for anything and a diver's suit is more stuffy than a night club. But the high spot of the display was a chariot race --- Ben Hur, <sup>being on all cylinders</sup> ~~rebuilt in 1937~~.

MOTOR STRIKE.

Detroit --- 100,000 ~~strikers~~ <sup>held</sup> workers in the motor car industry of America ~~put on~~ a demonstration outside the works in sympathy with 6,000 strikers who remained inside. Nearing the end of the strike the city mobilised 4,000 police in case of possible trouble, but the huge crowd remained on its best behaviour.
