CYCLISTS.

Eleven countries took part in the International Cup Race at the Crystal Palace --- twenty-nine of the world's best riders flashing round the track pedal to pedal and wheel to wheel. Cycling becomes increasingly popular in Britain --- except with motorists. Throughout the race, spectators give money prizes for competitors who put up exceptional performances, and you seem to be able to get a drink at any time, so maybe that's why it's so popular. The winner was Jean Aerts, of Belgium.

QUEEN MARY.

London --- a garden party in the grounds of Lambeth Palace. Switchbacks and donkeys and ponies were among the attractions provided. In fact it was a glorious day for a --- you'll be sick -- for a garden party. Queen Mary's gracious presence added to the occasion when her Majesty arrived with the Archbishop of Canterbury to receive purses on behalf of the Invalid Children's Aid Association
SUPPLY DROPPING. 7

Odiham --- Squadrons of the Royal Air Force took part in a rehearsal of supply dropping. To inhabitants of a beleaguered city the sight of planes flying overhead to drop food instead of bombs must be very welcome. They've got the job down to a fine art, and they say they can drop eggs 3,000 feet without smashing them. ~~That's~~ ~~That's~~ The Air Force is wonderful --- even a hen can't do that!
