CADETS AT WALKER-ON-TYNE.

At Walker-on-Tyne, an enthusiastic and gallant band of cadets has been drilling for years. During the deptression depression when the local shipyards on which their parents depended were closed, these lads carried on with no proper uniforms, turning out in what clothes they had. Then one day, a local citizeh raised a fund by public subscription to provide uniforms, and with joy these boys tried them on. These exclusive pictures by G. B. News show this happy/corps drilling under Capt Mills, and Cadet Major Findlay, a veteran of the Burmese War of 1888. With such an array of medals, it should be a grand incentive to these young Britons to follow in thes do swin footsteps But it's not all drill, and boxing matches make a welcome change from parades.
