

CHAMBERLAIN AT CARDIFF.

In bad weather

574

The Prime Minister addressed a large audience at Cardiff after a fifty-mile tour of the former distressed areas ~~in~~ ~~South Wales~~ --- and he made a welcome definition of the attitude of the Government.

Later reports on the Tientsin blockade stated that it was being modified, but in the meantime ~~the~~ Japanese forces in China continue to draw the focus of world attention to its new trouble-centre. So we draw comfort from another section of Mr Chamberlain's speech in which he pointed out that our Navy was the most powerful in the world -- that our Army increased daily in numbers and efficiency. And that our Air Force, in the quality of its men and the speed and power of its machines, was unexcelled by ~~any other~~ ^{the} Air Force ~~of any other country.~~ of any other country.
