

BRITISH AND FRENCH ARMY FOOTBALL.

638

A crowd of thirty-five thousand at Parc des Princes watched the battle between the Allied Armies in France. There were several internationals in the two sides and the result was a draw, one all. France kicked off --- the team in white shorts. And from the first whistle there were thrills enough to satisfy the most ardent fan.

The British Army were the first to score. This passing ~~movement~~ movement gave the ball to Edelston at inside right --- a long shot just beat the goalie and found the net.

But before the first half was much older France drew level - the ball swung in from the left wing and Hiltl headed it in.
