

Ever since the first blitz on London, St Paul's Cathedral has stood where the fight was hottest. ~~This noble example of the genius of Wren's architecture stands among ruins. Its own escape from total destruction has seemed miraculous.~~ Now one more bomb has made it necessary to close the Cathedral to visitors, though services are still carried on. This time a large bomb went through the roof of the North trans ept - ~~many crashed into the interior.~~ The occupant of ~~a~~ ^{a bed} down below had an amazing escape - suffering only from shock.

Our Cameraman walked round with the Canon gazing upon this senseless wreckage. We all ask ourselves if it is too much to hope that St Paul's will survive the Nazi vandalism.
