

RODERICK AND DANA HAR.

The speed of Roderick's attack and his brilliant foot-work put his opponent out of the picture. The challenger, famed for the quality of his straight left, found himself beaten at his own game. He couldn't change his tactics to break up Roderick's ceaseless attack.

2 The fight went on at top speed, but it seemed as though Roderick won every round but one -- in the thirteenth Danahar went down -- his courage alone prevented him being knocked out.

The champion was on top all the way, crashing terrific blows as he pressed his advantage home. Danahar had to exert every ounce of gameness to keep on his feet, fighting a losing battle with sublime <sup>grip</sup> ~~courage~~ and sportsmanlike pluck.

A few more mixing moments, and Roderick sent Danahar spinning down for another count. Roderick tore into his opponent and tried all out for a K.O. -- but he had to be content with a verdict on points. Anyhow, that gave him the title for ~~third~~ the third time, so now he has it for keeps.
