LATEST PICTURES FROM ITALY.

General Alexander surveys the situation from Anzio where great battles have been fought by beachhead troops of the Fifth Army and German reserves. The flow of our reinforcements was kept up after the ^{initial} ~~initial~~ landings; and these men met stiff opposition on the road to Rome.

We have this week some more messages from men of the British Armies in Italy for their folks at home. First, a Midlander, Ernie Cole.

Then a Welshman, Gunner Waite.

And lastly a man from the West Country, Cook Ellison.

Now across the Mediterranean to the Middle East; ships arriving, with the families of Yugoslav partisans who are putting up such a fine fight against Nazi divisions. Yugoslavia is one country that was overrun by Germans, but never bowed in submission. These people come of hardy fighting stock; we hope that great Allied aid may reach their sons and brothers early; to enable these refugees to return to their homes, freed at last of the invader.
