

Orly crash

France: The shattered remains of a modern airliner lie scattered around the runway at Orly Airport, near Paris.

Coming into land, during fog, after a flight from Tunis, the plane — (carrying sixty-six passengers and crew) hit the ground with terrific impact — and completely ~~disintegrated~~ ^{broke up}.

~~It~~ It seems almost a ~~modern~~ miracle that ~~that no one was killed in the crash~~ ^{no one was killed in the crash} — though one passenger died later, in hospital.

And from a Paris suburb comes news in happier vein, as trotting ~~champions~~ champions go into action in the Prix d'Amerique.

Following them round, the camera catches the graceful style of the seventeen runners, ~~that included~~ ^{including} the champions of Sweden and Italy.

Last year's winner, Gelinotte, conceded twenty-five yards on handicap — yet there she is — disputing the lead with Hatik.

But the game mare draws away to win in record time. Her forty-sixth victory — and she now tops over £70,000 in prize money.

Britannia

London Airport: Another landmark in British Civil Aviation as the new "Bristol" "Britannia" turbo-prop airliner enters commercial passenger service with B.O.A.C. WITH A FAREWELL WAVE FROM CAPTAIN TAYLOR ~~XXXX~~ ^{SHE'S} all ready to fly to Johannesburg in less than twenty-three hours.

✶ The world's most advanced turbo-prop airliner writes a new chapter in aviation history.../