Germany: A Red Cross plane arriving at Frankfurt brings the final chapter in a tragic story of the sea.

These are five of the six survivors of the ill-fated windjammer "Pamir" - which foundered in an Atlantic hurricane, with eighty-six on board.

After fifty-four agonising hours - up to their necks in a partly-submerged lifeboat - the survivors were picked up by the ^{American} ~~US~~ cargo vessel "Saxon".

To-day, their terrible ordeal is over - and they rejoin their families amid a joyous welcome.

~~Just five survivors, with tragic memories, of a proud and stately ship...~~
