

BOY BOXING CHAMPS

The boxing youth of London brought their mothers and fathers to the Albert Hall to see the finals of the Boys Clubs Boxing Championships. At the bottom of the list of 18 weights were Slogger Slinney and Battling Barrow. They hurled their six stone at each other with gusto; their heads just about level with the top rope. When the weights climbed to 9 stone Harrow's J. Croxon and Repton's Dutilleul added to the excitement of a great night's sport. Both fighters kept things going on an even footing till Croxon's better staying power gave him a hard-earned win on points.

For cool self-possession these young battlers could give some pro's a point or two. Here's Richards of Peel Institute in a spot of hard hitting with Hunt of Caius College. The weight is 9 stone 7 and the whole lot of it went into every wallop, with no punches pulled.

Almost, but not quite out, is loser Hunt. Tough boys of the evening were dark skinned Rood and Parker, fighting at top weight of 10 stone seven. Classiest fighter of the show, Rood gave a copy book performance with beautiful left and right handed punches that Mr. Parker stepped too often for comfort. Clean hitting and sportsmanship (closing on an old fashioned knock-out) made this the day of the Boy Champs.
