

CHILDREN STAGE "OLYMPICS"

Backyard sportsmen in Stockholm stage their own Olympic Games. Highlight of the day's events is the toddler's tricycle race.

What the competitors lack in finesse they make up for in enthusiasm - and recklessness. Hey seanie, you're off side! But the ladies always have the last word.

Less arduous is the hepsotch contest. Months of after-school practice makes an expert. This girl must have hopped a lot of homework. Years of exacting training are needed to reach the championship class in marbles but these boys have the deftness of master hands at the game.

This over-anxious cyclist knows that a quick get-away makes all the difference to a split second victory. No Olympic athlete ever laboured more seriously over his job than these youngsters who possess the determination that leads to the top - and the tape.
