Church House, Westminster, wartime home of the House of Commons, is revisited by the Ministers who carried out their Parliamentary duties under the fire of an enemy bent on driving the Government from London.

Commemorating the use of the building as the temporary seat of Parliament, the Prime Minister and Mr. Churchill unveil an inscribed panel. Mr. Churchill, in describing the reluctance of M.P.s to set a bad example by leaving the bombed House of Commons during the war, says.....

Tokyo's eligible bachelors are on parade. In Japan there are many ways of getting a husband, but the girls who belong to the Kibosha - Japan's Lonely Hearts Club - have hit upon a method that never misfires. They gather in a picnic ground in Tokyo and taking their cue from Cupid, shoot arrows at numbered targets. Every number's a certain winner but there's no guarantee that the prize will come up to expectations.

The suspense is most embarrassing for a shy maiden but it is not long before she can strike up a nodding acquaintance with the man she has aimed for.
