WIRELESS HELPS ROCKABYE NURSE

Meet Major Jean Wood - an ex-serviceman with a flair for wireless communications. His hobby has made him a radio rockabye nurse. Each loudspeaker listens in on a baby sleeping in nearby houses. This is Sandee. She's sleeping well. She'll broadcast any complaints over the microphones.

What about Karen - another of the Major's watchbabies? She's alright, too.

And here is Dutch. A bit fidgety, but otherwise O.K.

This one doesn't sound asleep.

It's Sandee - crying her eyes out.

Come on, Major, you have work to do. Shanks Village, New York community centre that has hit upon this novel idea - provides temporary homes for Army veterans. Major Wood's war assignment as a signals officer explains how he learned his present job....no, not this part of it - he studied this through a correspondence course - on two of his own children.

Sandee's asleep again. At ease - Major - you can go home and relax, read a good book, but what do you do when they all start crying?

X This here is Major Jean Wood. He minds babies by radio. Each loud speaker listens in on a baby sleeping in nearby homes. Sleeping? Yes, sleeping. This is Sandee. She's okay. She'll broadcast any complaints over this here microphone.

X What about Karen?

X She's okay.

X And this here is Butch. Slightly restless. But okay. At ease, major. Pretty soft. Hey, I think I hear a baby crying. No, just a passing car. That ain't no passing car. It's Sandee. X Let's go, Major. This here ~~xxx~~ Shanks Village, New York, gives veterans temporary homes. Major Wood's an army officer takin' graduate work in radio. He's real expert in communications, which explains how he learned his present job. . . No, not ~~this~~ this here part. He learned this here on two kids of his own.

X Well, Sandee's asleep, again. You can go home, Major, and relax.
