

ANIMAL HOSPITAL SERVICE EXPANDS

With a blessing from the Bishop of Chelmsford, a new caravan dispensary for sick animals goes into service. Patients at the main Essex Hospital attend in testimony to the good work of a voluntary organisation which has made sick animals its cause for a quarter of a century. In the well-equipped wards, pets and workers receive the same expert treatment. Some are being cared for here while their owners are in hospital. Others (like the gypsies' horse) have been abandoned. Everything is laid on for the patients comfort - only the Radio Doctor is missing. When they are cured - the grounds of the hospital make an ideal Convalescent home. A green meadow - a good rest and a good companion.
