France honours old comrades-in-arms - as Admiral Sir Harold Burroughs, an officer of the Legion of Honour, joins a proud company.

In New York, the Overseas Press Club remembers an old friend. The correspondents present a gold-plated typewriter to America's retired Secretary of State - George Marshall. His successor, Dean Acheson says of his new assignment:-

Twenty-five hundred tons of wood pulp go up in the year's longest, costliest blaze, as fire strikes in darkness at a Dartford, Kent, paper mill. Believed to have been started by spontaneous combustion following the flooding of the mill by the Thames, the fire engulfs bales worth about a hundred-thousand pounds. These exclusive pictures show firemen who, called in from seven areas, pump in $\frac{1}{2}$ million gallons of water. Though thousands of tons have already been saved, the remainder will probably take a week to burn itself out.
