The CRS police forces are guarding the church while old belly treasures of by gone centuries are removed and carried to the new church which is not yet entirely finished in the nearby and high level village of LES BOISSES. The Priest goes in his old church for the last time and whilst the men are moving the last furniture from the church, villagers have come a last time to pray.

The bells are also removed, and the village children look at them in wonder, while their parents for whom have tolled the bells so often cry over their lost remembrances.

The bells are loaded on a sleigh and taken out of the cemetery towards their new church. Meanwhile an enormous bulldozer is attacking the piled snow on the graves, as the dreary work of removing the deads will begin immediately.

Already last destructions of isolated farms have began, Progress must not be stopped or delayed by remaining walls...

Meanwhile the water level is mounting steadily at the foot of the enormous dam.
