LORD MAYOR'S SHOW

From a rostrum in front of the Mansion House, Alderman Seymour Howard, London's new Lord Mayor, watches the traditional procession through the City streets, and then takes his place in the 200 year old scarlet and gold coach. At the rear of the parade he drives to the Law Courts for the customary inauguration ceremony. As always, there's second to none marching from the Senior Service. For once, the weather fails to be traditional, and there's sunshine all the way - Just as well, for this year's theme is "The Colonies Come to Town".

High-spot of the parade is the Russ Henderson Calypso Band, representing the West Indies.

A fanfare greets the Lord Mayor as he arrives at the Law Courts.

With the gayest and most spectacular procession since the war, the City hails Alderman Seymour Howard, Lord Mayor of London.
