BARUCH -- Aarsoth

Army scouts of the future will be able to carry an amazing third eye with them on their missions -- a portable TV camera and transmitter weighing only fifty-five pounds. There are no cumbersome cables to hamper movement and the camera's eye records objectives -- like this dam -- in accurate detail.

With the picture in focus, word is flashed to the receiving station where the dam -- many miles away -- comes in surprisingly sharp and clear.

Here, a GI turns the camera on a mythical enemy train in another demonstration of a new push-button weapon of war -- a silent spy, recording who is doing what ... when ... where ... and how!

The Army's mighty "Redstone" rocket is also revealed for the first time!
