

52/44PRINCESS AT FILM PREMIERE.

The most glamorous first night for a long time drew celebrities by the hundreds. Neither Carol Lealie nor anyone else - certainly not Eva Bartok - looked in anger, either back or foward. With Jackie Rae came pretty Janette Scott. Then the Chairman of Associated British Pictures, Sir Philip Warter, with Lady Warter and their daughter. Many where already assembled in the foyer. There with Vivien Leigh was Michael Redgrave.

Trevor Howard, then the Managing Director of Associated British, Mr. C.J. Latta, with his wife, brought their little grand-daughters, who had a part to play later on. Everything added to the air of excitement and expectancy. It was going to be a "Good Show".

By this time all the stars and other important people had assembled - here were Richard Todd and his wife - and setting the royal seal upon the glittering occasion, Princess Margaret arrived. Her Royal Highness drew every eye, radiant as ever, cheered outside and expectantly awaited in the foyer. She wore a striking white satin gown, with full, bell-shaped skirt.

The Princess graciously accepted a bouquet from Mr. Latta's seven-year-old twin grand-daughters, Pam and Peg Boyd-Gibbins.