NEWS FLASHES.

Japan's royal baby was 18 days old when Princess Michiko left the hospital. The nurse carried Prince Hiro to the car. It's been a wonderful thing for the Japanese people that the Crown Prince and his wife - a commoner - have been blessed with a son. Photographers were allowed all the pictures they wanted; a liberty they certainly would not have been granted before the world war. And what lovely pictures they took.

Where there's smoke there's fire, but this new incinerator, invented by Gordon Heiskinon, can have plenty of fire, no smoke at all. It can burn 300 pounds of any old rubbish inside an hour. First of all in the ordinary way, it makes smoke. Now, switching on the eliminator, it begins to consume its smoke, and in one second no more comes out of the chimney. The heat produced can be used for space-heating, so that a factory can dispose of rubbish and keep itself warm at the same time.

Toledo Sports Arena came to life in all 36 lanes, to open the 57th American Bowling Congress. There were more than 30-thousand entries, from places all over the States. And how easy the good ones make it look.

Steve Nagy whom some consider, the greatest player in America, was in devastating form.

Even the one that got away didn't last long.

A big night in the West End. Princess Margaret and her fiance had an evening at the theatre. She had a word with Dorothy Reynolds, the talented author of the play's book and lyrics, and with her old friend, Julian Slade, who wrote the music. Her Royal Highness congratulated them both while hundreds waited outside to cheer the Princess as she left for home.
