

AMATEURS DRIVE LIKE CHAMPS.

Why leave all the fun of track racing to the Grand Prix professionals? 150 amateur drivers, who fancy themselves as budding Jack Brabhams, had a field day on a track made round an old flying field at Bad Kreuznach. They soon found out that there's a lot more to motor racing than you know till you've tried it. To make matters worse a fall of sleet had turned the track into a skating rink.

Must have been his lucky day!
