AFTER THE RAID.

The other night the inhabitants of a SouthEast Coast Town.... were awakened by heavy anti-aircraft fire.

The next morning they find their streets littered with shrapnel.
But you needn't think they're frightened by a little thing like that.
What you got Gert? that'll make a good souvenir.

Although there were explosions, and the air was filled with whining pieces of metal, there was no air raid warning, the authorities know why. These pictures show that when the shells are flying, its best to "take cover".
