AFTERMATH IN ADDIS ABABA

Long after the fall of Addis Ababa, Italian prisoners poured in from all directions. After five years of subjugation, Abyssinian inhabitants see their one time overlords marched into captivity. Among the prisoners from the Juba River sector is the Italian Commander General Santini.

Spring Cleaning after the big dust up, Imperial troops stack together the enormous haul of surrendered rifles and machine guns. Arms dumps which will be put to good use when the salvage corps have finished collecting.

Large prison Camps were quickly established in Addis Ababa so that friends and relatives may visit their menfolk. Surely a unique situation in time of war. Italian "civilisation" ought to learn a lot from the Abyssinians.
