STUDENTS REHEARSE.

Picture.:- Preparations for the most 'arty' dance of the season. All done by kindness and London art students. The float which will parade the Chelsea Arts Ball floor at midnight on New Year's Eve is designed by the students themselves. This represents the Bronze Age, so now we know why past times were called the 'good old days", - - although this shows a girl at the stake, but I am sure she will have chips with it later.

It was pretty brave of these girls to arrange this rehearsal. The morning was a freezing cold Christmasy one, so goose-flesh was plentiful. This tableau looks like a scene from

"Please Teacher". Sitting on that freezing float is almost bound to give those girls a cold in the head - - attishee !
