

HURRICANE.

17/9/54.

America's Hurricane Edna was given the biggest advance publicity of any tempest in history; and, not unnaturally, it turned out to be not so super-celestial as promised. But this was how it hit places like New York and New England; and this was bad enough.

Typical of the damage caused in the farmland districts, are these scenes from Maine, and <sup>from</sup> New Brunswick in Canada.

This was the second great American hurricane in <sup>two</sup> ~~weeks~~ <sup>weeks</sup>; and this time --- although the gales were less fearful, they were accompanied by torrential rain.
