

Back in London --- we find a campaign by the Metropolitan Police to reduce the trail of havoc caused by man; a campaign to induce the motorist to drive with courtesy. Everybody knows that good driving is largely a matter of simple courtesy; and it's lack of good manners in driving that leads to far too many accidents. So --- by talks and messages --- the constable is trying to show that ~~xxx~~ manners makyth man --- and letteth him go on living.

And now to Aberdeen --- where the Royal Yacht Britannia brought the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Charles and Princess Anne and Princess Margaret into harbour, after a cruise along the coastline of Scotland.

Her Majesty was welcomed by the Lord Provost, Mr George Stephen; and they came ashore for a tour of the city --- to be followed by the annual holiday at Balmoral.
