On the next day, Her Royal Highness made a tour of the workshops of the East African Railways,....an extensive tour that might well have daunted the sturdiest of residents. A locomotive newly arrived from Britain, was one of the objects of special attention.

The country's great farming interests were not forgotten; magnificent cattle from neighbouring ~~XXXXX~~ farms were on parade at the Kenya Royal Agricultural Show; and one of the exhibits made sure of being noticed by the royal visitor.

At the end of the Show, the Princess presented the cups and awards to the winners.

Thousands of schoolchildren cheered lustily when the Princess arrived at the African Stadium.

Among the local celebrities with whom Princess Margaret chatted, were members of the Kenya team for the Olympic Games.....and she also presented them with badge and flag.

At the Kaloleni ~~Station~~ Estate --- a visit to the Children's Nursery; ~~.....~~.....where a good time was obviously had by all.

And this was the occasion of a formal banquet, at Government House.

With the Governor, Sir Evelyn Baring and Lady Mary Baring and eighty guests.

And --- back in Mombasa --- the Duke of Edinburgh was driving through the floodlit streets, of the town where Princess Margaret's African tour began; a brief stay, before joining the royal yacht to sail for the Seychelles.
